

PRINCE IS PRICKED BY COUNT'S SWORD

DROPS OF BLOOD END FRENCH-ITALIAN FEND.

Long Talked of Duel Fought—The Frenchman's Strictures on the Conduct of the Italian Soldiers in Abyssinia the Cause of the Meeting—Great Rejoicing in Italy.

Paris, Aug. 17.—The Count of Turin and Prince Henry of Orleans fought a duel with swords at 5 o'clock Sunday morning in the Bois de Marechaux, at Vancresson.

The fighting was most determined and lasted twenty-six minutes. There were five engagements, of which two were at close quarters.

Prince Henry received two serious wounds, in the right shoulder and the right side of the abdomen. The Count of Turin was wounded in the right hand.

Prince Henry was taken to the residence of the Duc de Chartres. His condition is as satisfactory as could be expected. The doctors express the opinion that no important organ was touched, but absolute rest is necessary.

The Count of Turin, considering the letters of Prince Henry of Orleans to the Figaro offensive to the Italian army, wrote to him on July 6, demanding a retraction.

This letter could not be answered until Aug. 11, the day of the arrival of Prince Henry in France. The Prince replied to the Count's demand by telegram, maintaining the right of a traveler to record his experiences. The hostile meeting was then inevitable.

In the first assault Prince Henry was hit in the right breast, though the weapon did not penetrate the thorax. On the strength of the report of the doctors the seconds decided that the combat must go on.

The second assault was stopped because the combatants came into close quarters.

In the third assault the Count of Turin was hit in the back of the right hand, but the wound was slight.

In the fourth assault, the umpire, Major Leontieff, declared that the sword of Prince Henry was bent, and stopped the engagement long enough to furnish the Prince with a new weapon.

In the fifth assault the combatants again got into close quarters, and were immediately stopped. Prince Henry in a counter blow being hit in the right lower region of the abdomen.

The doctors on both sides examined the wound and declared that Prince Henry was rendered by it clearly inferior to his antagonist.

The seconds proposed that the combat be stopped, and this was done by common accord.

The details of the duel show that the encounter was very sharp and determined. Immediately on the crossing of swords Prince Henry vigorously pressed his adversary.

The Temps says that the wound in the abdomen of Prince Henry is serious but not alarming. Had the Count of Turin's steel gone half a centimeter deeper, the intestines would have been perforated. After his wound had received a preliminary dressing Prince Henry walked to his carriage unaided.

The Count of Turin, accompanied by his seconds, left Paris for Italy Sunday afternoon. He was not experiencing any special distress from his wound.

REJOICING IN ROME.

Royal Family Overwhelmed With Congratulatory Messages.

Rome, Aug. 16.—The news of the result of the duel was received with the greatest enthusiasm. Crowds filled the streets, cheering for the count of Turin and the army, and calling upon the bands in the public squares to play the royal hymn. Extra guards have been mounted at the French embassy and consulate.

Congratulatory telegrams are showered upon the members of the royal family from all parts of Italy, and many have been received from abroad. It is unlikely that any diplomatic complications will ensue.

Emperor William has telegraphed the count his warmest congratulations.

He was a member of the convention in Mississippi in 1861, which passed the ordinance of secession, and he voted for and signed that instrument. He was chairman of the democratic state executive committee of Mississippi in 1875-76. In 1879 he was appointed one of the judges of the supreme court of Mississippi and elected chief justice, but resigned his seat on the supreme bench in February, 1881, to take his seat in the senate March 4 in that year, and was re-elected in 1886 and again in January, 1892. All working members of unions of organized labor, no matter in what line, are to be assessed so much per day, according, of course, to what they receive as wages, for the benefit and support of the striking coal diggers.

Oil Again Struck in Indiana.

New Albany, Ind., Aug. 16.—An important discovery has been made in this vicinity, by which it is expected the city of New Albany will become the foremost industrial town in the state of Indiana. The Messick brothers claim to have discovered an inexhaustible supply of mineral oil within easy reach of the city, and they have presented their claims in a manner that leaves no room for doubt as to the stability of their enterprise.

FIERCE RACE WAR COST THREE LIVES

WHITES AND NEGROES IN A DESPERATE CONFLICT.

Arkansas Town Stirred By a Savage Conflict - Attempt of a Deputy Sheriff to Arrest a Negro Charged With Murder Was the Cause of the Battle - Much Excitement.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 16.—The bloodiest race riot that has occurred in Arkansas in months took place at Palarm, a little station thirty miles from Little Rock, Saturday evening. As a result three men are dead, another is fatally wounded and several others are injured. The dead are:

HARRISON KERR, colored; shot all to pieces.

CHARLES PETERS, colored; killed instantly.

CHARLES ANDRY, white; shot through the heart.

The injured are:

J. T. Clark, Jr., a telegraph operator; shot through the shoulder; probably fatally wounded.

D. R. Owens, white, deputy sheriff of Perry county; shot through the groin; seriously wounded.

Owens, a deputy sheriff from Perry county, had a warrant for Harrison Kerr, a negro charged with murder. When he attempted to make the arrest at Palarm Kerr resisted and opened fire on the officer. Andry and Clarke went to Owens' assistance, and five or six negroes joined in with Kerr. A pitched battle ensued, in which over fifty shots were fired. When the shooting was over Andry and Peters lay dead on the ground, Clark had staggered into his office and fallen upon the floor, Owens was found lying in a ditch near the station and Kerr and the remainder of his companions had disappeared.

By this time the entire town was at the scene of the shooting and a posse started in pursuit of the fleeing negroes. Harrison Kerr was found lying dead in the roadway a mile away, literally shot to pieces, blood running from five wounds in his body. The other negroes who participated in the bloody affair continued their flight, and have not yet been captured. The country is in a fever of excitement, and should Kerr's associates be captured they will never come to trial.

RECALLS DAYS OF '49.

Great Rush of Gold Miners to Trinity County, California.

San Francisco, Aug. 16.—Additional confirmation of the reports of rich gold strikes in Trinity County are at hand, giving details that have not been made public before. As a result of these new finds a mining boom has developed in Trinity that recalls the days of 1849.

The probable value of the ledge of the Coffee Creek region is perhaps best demonstrated by the extensive placer diggings adjoining Trinity Center. The most extensive is the Bloss and McClary mine. The property comprises 600 acres of patented land completely encircling Trinity Center and the purchase price at a recent sale was $56,000. A recent clean-up of the mine is reported to have yielded the present owners over $1,000 a day. It is a mountain of pay gravel.

All that Trinity needs is experienced miners, as even green horns with crude appliances are taking plenty of gold from the ledges.

Hear Bishop Fowler.

Lena, Ill., Aug. 16.—Ten thousand people heard Bishop Fowler at the Methodist camp grounds Sunday. The camp meeting closes today with a lecture by Bishop Fowler on "Abraham Lincoln." It has been the most successful meeting in the history of the association. The United Evangelical camp meeting is in progress at Oakdale, in charge of Elder W. H. Fouke of Chicago. Bishop Dubs was the principal speaker Sunday, and 8,000 people heard him.

DECATUR STRIKERS GAIN THEIR POINT

CRUSADERS MUCH ENCOURAGED AT PROSPECT.

The Miners Will Quit Work—Action Taken Is Because of Sympathy With the Strikers—Labor Leaders Confident of Victory in West Virginia—More Injunctions Issued

Decatur, Ill., Aug. 16.—Strike talk and the presence of the visiting coal miners at the edge of the city in the improvised camps made Sunday anything but a day of rest. Thousands of citizens drove to the camps and considerable sympathy was expressed for the strangers.

In the forenoon a large body of Decatur miners marched to the camp to invite the strikers to come to the city in a body to attend a mass meeting of citizens called for the purpose of giving an expression bearing on the alleged illegal conduct of the city and county in forbidding the striking visitors the freedom of the highways and the streets. The strikers sought permission of Mayor Taylor and Sheriff Nicholson to march into the city in a body, and after consultation it was granted, it being stipulated that after the meeting all of the miners should form in line and march back to camp in a body.

The conditions were accepted and the strikers to the number of about 300 marched in, past the home of the manager of the coal mines. The marchers did not make any demonstration at any point. All were orderly and quiet.

The strikers did not return to their camp, as was expected, but remained in the city to attend a meeting at the Dougherty hall. It was a meeting of coal-miners exclusively, attended by many Decatur miners. It was voted by those present to quit work at once. They do not strike, as they have no grievance, but are persuaded to quit out of sympathy for those who have a grievance.

Strikers Claim Large Accessions and Hopeful Prospects.

Fairmont, W. Va., Aug. 16.—The outlook in this region is more favorable for the success of the strike than ever before, and every indication points to large accessions to the ranks of the strikers. The leaders are confident that they have at last got things on the move, and that victory is in sight.

Judge Jackson, upon his arrival at home Saturday night, at once heard six applications in chambers for injunctions against the strikers in Fayette county. The orders handed down cover exactly the same grounds as the injunction granted July 28 against the strikers upon application of James Sloan, Jr., principal owner of the Monongah mines. Judge Jackson refuses to discuss the criticisms of his injunction against Debs and others on the application of the Fairmont operators.

Pennsylvania Marchers Idle.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 16.—A leaden sky and fitful showers contributed to the feeling of depression which existed at the miners' camps at Turtle and Plum Creeks Sunday. The same grim determination to stick it out until starvation brings defeat, or their efforts victory, is apparent, but there are no propositions to attain their end by force or to go contrary to the sheriff's orders.

Want the Temple Amendment.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 16.—The Republican state convention at Cedar Rapids Wednesday will be asked to insert in the platform a plank indorsing what is known in Iowa politics as "the Temple amendment." It is an amendment offered by Representative M. L. Temple of Clark county, a Republican, to the Iowa railroad law at the special session last winter and in brief provides that the acceptance of any insurance from a relief association connected with a railroad company shall not be a bar to the recovery of damages from the company.

A feature of the new university will be that it entails no payment of fees of any kind upon the part of the students. The service rendered will be entirely free and no charge will be made directly or indirectly.

Ethan Allen Hitchcock is a great grandson of Col. Ethan Allen, who captured Fort Ticonderoga "in the name of the great Jehovah and the continental congress."

Creede Mines May Close.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 16.—It is probable that the great silver mines at Creede, Colo., will be closed down on account of the low price of silver, unless railroad and smelting rates are reduced. Several conferences have been held between the mine owners and the smelter and railroad officials, and it is said the latter evinced a disposition to make every concession possible in order to keep the mines in operation.

President to Visit Veterans.

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 16.—The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Army of the Potomac to be held in this city Friday and Saturday, will be an event of more than usual importance because of the presence of President McKinley, Vice-President Hobart and Governor Frank S. Black. The list of organizations which will participate in the parade is large and the showing of the troops will be excellent. It is probable that there will be more than 3,000 men in line.

TWO ABLE SERMONS BY REV. DR. INCE

QUINCY PASTOR OCCUPIES THE BAPTIST PULPIT.

The Burdens and Mysteries of the Christian Religion Are Light Compared to the Hardships Imposed by Sin—Other Services of The Day.

Rev. Dr. Ince of Quincy, Ill., preached Sunday morning and evening at the Baptist church. His text for the morning discourse was in Matt. 11-30, and he said in part:

This is a skeptical age. The Divine word is wrongly interpreted, and religion not exemplified as it ought to be. The difficulties of religion have been turned to suit the wants of the individual. The religion of Christ has great burdens and mysteries. There are intellectual burdens. Can you understand all the doctrines of the Word? Then there are burdens of duty. The martyrs endured these burdens. Men are tempted to steal or to resent insult that they may honor God, yet in all these burdens, there is this truth: These burdens in comparison with the burdens of the world, are what Jesus called them, light. Which is harder to believe, that God made all things, or that this great universe came by chance.

This is equally true in the world of duty. For every martyr to the religion of Christ, the devil has had ten who endure his hard mastery.

How many there are today who are saying, "O, that I might be what I once was. The yoke of sin is heavy."

See again that the text suggests the inspiration of companionship. We are yoked with Jesus. He will help you bear the burdens of life. Sheridan's ride in the valley of the Shenandoah illustrates the inspiration of companionship. His presence turned the tide of battle. Jesus is with you in all of the hardships and trials of life to inspire you. See the many illustrations in actual life. How many who are passing through the valley of sorrow are comforted by the presence of the Savior, and how much more we shall enjoy His presence and realize the truth of His words in the blessed life to come.

Dr. Ince's text for the evening was in Isa. 26:3. Thou wilt not keep in perfect peace whose heart is stayed upon thee." He said:

"The Savior gave us one of his last blessings peace. In this world of trouble we need peace. Christ was at all time giving those in trouble and need, that blessing of peace."

Notice first that peace is not a frenzy of piety. It is not indifference. It is not the acceptance of false truth.

Real peace is the result of God's keeping. "I will keep him in perfect peace," God keeps us. There is no consciousness of the presence of God. A security that covers from his presence. It is perfect peace, because it is one of God's own creation. He does not remove us to some other sphere, but keeps his children just where they are. Under all the sorrows of life, he gives a perfect peace. It is a perfect peace, because He can give nothing that is imperfect.

Notice that the possession of this peace is conditional. Our minds must be staid upon God. Everything is conditioned. We can have just what we are willing to pay for. The greatest thing for us is to have our mind staid upon God. How grand it is to see God in everything. Are you in trouble and anxiety. Fix your mind upon God and you will have perfect peace. Don't try to get peace elsewhere. God alone can bless you with a peace that passeth all understanding. The Y. P. S. C. E. was led by Miss VanVranken. It was the regular missionary meeting.

THREE FAIR IDEAS TESTED THIS MONTH

JANESVILLE MANAGERS ARE WATCHING EXPERIMENTS.

Plans Developed in Rockford, Peru and Waukesha May Be of Value in Shaping the Janesville Programme Superintendent McKerrow's Idea About Judging Live Stock.

People interested in the management of the Rock County fair and the Janesville Midwinter fair are watching three enterprises this month. One is the big Rockford fair, another the free street fair in Peru, Ind., described in Sunday's Chronicle, the third is the Waukesha County fair. At each of these fairs a riking departure from the usual methods have been made.

In Waukesha County Superintendent George McKerrow will combine the fair and the summer farm institute. He says:

"Stock judging as performed at American fairs is not calculated to very much enlighten the average farmer who sees it. I have contended for some time that the English and Scotch system of catalogues, information sheets, at the ring side and a bulletin board in the ring, with a brief oral explanation of why the decisions are so made should be given by the judge in concise language, so that all spectators are able to hear and understand."

"It has been charged and not without some reason, that agricultural fairs do not fulfill their missions as educators for the farmer. To remedy this and bring more forcibly before the people, if possible, what can be learned by the object lessons to be seen at a good fair we have concluded to give three short forenoon sessions of the farmer's institute at the Waukesha county fair, with the prize winning animals for illustration. These animals will be passed upon by the institute experts and the strong points which entitle them to their places will be shown."

The following program has been prepared for these institute sessions:

Wednesday, Aug. 25, 10:30 A. M.

Object Lessons at Fairs.....Supt. George McKerrow

Breeding and Developing Dairy Cows.....C. P. Goodrich

Kind of Horses to Raise.....Supt. George McKerrow

Thursday, Aug. 26, 10:30 A. M.

Beef and Dairy Types (Illustrated).....C. P. Goodrich

Friday, Aug. 27, 10:30 A. M.

Selecting and Judging Cows (Illustrated).....C. P. Goodrich

Judging Fruits (Illustrated).....R. J. Coe

Judging Horses (Illustrated).....Supt. George McKerrow

Questions and Discussions After Each Topic

All who wish to know more of horses, cattle, sheep and fruits are urged to be at the institute tent at 10:30 sharp, on each of the above dates. This will be an effort to carry out the real objects of fairs, and the sessions are free to all.

CAN SEND POSTAL CARD DUNS

New Ruling of the Attorney General Is of Much Interest.

The United States postal guide for August contains a number of matters of general public interest. The ruling of the attorney general permitting the use of postal cards for use in collecting bills, provided the language is moderate, is printed.

Third Assistant Postmaster General Merritt instructs postmasters to pay no attention to the request of business firms to open unsealed for registered packages. This is an old dodge of certain firms. They send packages to fictitious addresses and when notified that there is no such person, make some plausible excuse and request the postmaster to take charge of the package and dispose of it rather than force them to take it back. Postmaster General Gary states that owing to the failure of congress to appropriate money to indemnify the losers of registered mail matter, the law to that effect passed by the last congress is not effective.

The postmaster also directs that all mail matter directed to J. Damman and the Ducal Brunswick-Luneberg State Lottery at Hamburg, Germany, be returned to the senders because both are conducting a lottery.

Serve an Injunction on Disease

By invigorating a feeble constitution, renovating a debilitated physique, and enriching a thin and insubstantial circulation with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the finest, the most highly sanctioned and the most popular tonic and preventive in existence. It strengthens the stomach, remedies torpor of the liver and bowels, and gives a healthy impulse to the secretory and discharging functions of the kidneys and bladder. Not only does it arrest and prevent the recurrence of malarial fevers, but it furnishes the only adequate safeguard against them to persons who have never been afflicted with those maladies, but would be liable to incur them if medicinally unprotected. It eliminates from the blood certain impurities which the most skillful pathologists assign as the exciting cause of those agonizing complaints rheumatism and gout, and it is, moreover, an excellent remedy for an enfeebled and overwrought state of the nerves, and for mental dependency.

To Whom It May Concern,

I have this day emancipated my adopted son, Colbert Williams, who is a minor, and relinquished all right to his services and wages. I therefore caution any and all persons having dealings with said Colbert Williams not to extend credit to him on my account, as I shall pay no bills contracted by him, after this date.

Dated, August 14, A. D., 1897.

H. F. NOTT, Dealer in Pianos and Organs, Janesville, Wis.:

Dear Sir:—We purchased a Braumuller Piano about five years ago and can truthfully say that I take pleasure in stating that it has given the most perfect satisfaction in our home. Its capacity for standing in time is certainly wonderful and the tone today is as good if not better than the day we bought it, and would recommend it to any one wanting a first-class Piano.
Respectfully Yours,

SOME TOUCHING INCIDENTS

A correspondent sent from a little town in Nebraska two striking incidents, with a "touch of nature" in them both. They accent the sweetness of humanity and the common kindred of sorrow.

"At Christmas-tide," says the writer, "two of my neighbors each lost a child—one a little boy two years and a half old, a sweet little fellow, an only child. They had his funeral before light in the morning, as they were to take him away on the train going west, so they came down the street past the hotel, bringing the little white coffin; and the whole village turned out to follow to the train—men in working clothes and women with shawls over their heads, many of them weeping in sympathy. I got up from my bed and looked out, and cried, too."

"Our people here are not rich nor great, but when a single family has trouble it touches every heart. One's grief is the grief of all. Because these children died it was thought best not to have any Christmas festival at the church. As one woman said, it was not meet to make merry while so many in our town were in sorrow."

"I have been quite ill with a cold, and last Sunday we sent for a doctor. He lives seven miles from here, and has to drive through the woods three miles. As he was coming down he saw a mover's—emigrant's—wagon camped in the woods at one side. As he got near a woman motioned him to stop, and he said he never saw such a sad face as she had. She had a baby in her arms, and she wanted the doctor to come and see her husband and little girl, seven years old, both very sick in that wagon, lying on the bottom with only two old blankets under them."

"The man had typhoid fever and the little girl pneumonia. The doctor said he never saw such a pitiful sight, and he cried as he tried to tell it to me. The poor woman was nearly starved to death, and it was cold—no shelter but the timber. She had just fifty cents left, which she offered to the doctor for medicine. He would not take it, of course."

"After he told me I called Emma and the minister, who boards with us. One went one way, and one another, and gathered supplies. Everybody responded. The minister got an express wagon and had it loaded with bed-clothes, wearing clothes and things to eat—sack of potatoes, sack of apples, fresh meat, coffee, tea, sugar, canned fruit, and lots of other things—a heaping 'cargo.'"

It heals everything except a broken heart, may be said of De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. Pills and rectal diseases, cuts, burns, bruises, tetters, eczema and all skin troubles may be cured by it quickly and permanently. O. D. Stevens.

Turk and Armenian.

It must be admitted that the Armenians are not an easy people to get on with. They are distinguished by an energy, a busy-ness and a fondness for acquisition that are almost super-occidental. They are selfish, personally unattractive and strikingly lacking in traits of nobility and self-respect. The average Armenian is unquestionably of sharp intelligence so far as small things go. The saying is that it takes ten Jews to outwit one Greek and ten Greeks to outwit one Armenian. He is unquestionably extremely irritating to the quietistic, resigned, fatalistic Turk. The two have little in common. The Armenian is clearly a pestilent fellow, and the Turk has decided to get rid of him. The Armenian is a persistent source of unrest. He is a "kicker." What men do with "kickers" in the occidental scheme of things, is to vote them down. The Turk knows no other way than to club them down, cut their heads off, or sink them in the sea of Marmora. He is applying the trine recipe with patient zeal as occasion offers.—Atlantic.

A Forestry Policy.

In the selection of these lands for forest reserves, President Cleveland was guided by the recommendations of a committee appointed for the purpose by the National Academy of Sciences at the request of the secretary of the interior. This committee has recently made a detailed report, which the President has transmitted to congress, looking to the adoption of a definite forestry policy. The committee recommends the establishment of a permanent bureau of public forests, and the appointment of a board to determine what lands shall be set apart as forest reservations. It suggests that all public lands which are more valuable for timber than for agriculture or mining should be withdrawn from sale and settlement; and it recommends that regular troops be detailed to protect the public forests until a permanent bureau is established.

A Typical Widow.

"And how long," he asked, "have you been a widow?" "Oh," she replied, with a blush, "the year was yesterday. But, indeed, I didn't suppose you were so anxious, dearest. You must give me at least a month to get ready." When he got outside again he murmured to himself: "Now I know what old Weller meant."—Cleveland Leader.

Hard to Understand.

"Mamma, why should landladies object to children?" Mother—I'm sure I don't know; but go and see what the baby is crying about and tell Johnny to stop throwing things at people in the street and make George and Kate cease fighting and tell Dick if he doesn't stop blowing that tin trumpet I'll take it from him.—Triffles.

A-head of Pearline?

Never! Not a bit of it! That is out of the question. Probably not one of the many washing-powders that have been made to imitate Pearline would claim to excel it in any way. All they ask is to be considered "the same as" or "as good as" Pearline. But they're not even that. Pearline is today, just as it has been from the first, the best thing in the world for every kind of washing and cleaning.

Send Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

1717—Bloody battle of Belgrade: Prince Eugene defeated the Turks.

1777—Battle of Bennington, Vt.

1789—Ames Kendall, noted postmaster general in 1835-40, born in Dunstable, Mass.; died 1890.

1794—Merle d'Aubigne, historian of the reformation, was born near Geneva; died there 1857.

1823—Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, American statesman, died in Charleston; born 1746.

1851—Lopez, the first great Cuban leader, captured and executed. Lopez was a native of Venezuela, and after winning high rank in the armies of Spain became a Cuban patriot. Many filibustering expeditions from America attempted to aid his cause, but the Cubans did not rise, and his efforts came to naught. He fought hard and was alone when captured and prostrated by sickness and fatigue.

1882—Senator Benjamin Harvey Hill died at Atlanta; born 1839; he was a member of the Confederate senate and afterward of the United States senate.

1895—General Samuel Bell Maxey, a Confederate veteran and former senator from Texas, died at Eureka Springs, Ark.

RESULTS—THAT'S IT.

The country has reason to be satisfied with the business-like directness of the republican party. Only five months have passed since the inauguration of President McKinley, yet he has called congress together, the promised tariff bill has been placed upon the statute books, an international bimetallic commission has secured assurances of an international conference to be held in the United States, and the secretary of the treasury is now engaged in shaping up a system which shall give the promised revision of the currency, assuring such laws as will keep every dollar of the currency as good as gold. This is an extreme contrast with the conditions under the democratic administration four years ago, and the prospects before the country now are in equally striking contrast with those which confronted the suffering people in the first year of President Cleveland's administration.

A PARTY THAT KEEPS PROMISES.

These nervous people who were alarmed lest President McKinley's recent civil service order would prove unpopular are finding that the reverse is true. The order is being very generally commended by the wisest and most patriotic citizens of the country, and is condemned by only those who hoped to see faithful men and women removed from positions which they had honestly and conscientiously filled in order to give the places to others. President McKinley evidently supposes that the republican party and those seven millions of voters who supported it meant what was said by the St. Louis platform, which platform said of the civil service law, "We renew our repeated declarations that it shall be thoroughly and honestly enforced and extended wherever practicable."

TRACKS ARE KEPT WARM.

Despite the continued fall in the price of silver, western farmers are scrambling for cars with which to transport their grain for which they are getting large prices. Tens of thousands of cars which have been lying idle in car shops and upon the side tracks since 1893 are every one of them now being pressed into service, and thousands of others are demanded and cannot be had. While the prices for the grain which they are to transport have greatly advanced, for silver has steadily fallen. Of course there is no real significance in these two concurrent events, but Bryan and others would have had us believe last fall that wheat and silver rose and fell together.

Mr. Bryan's silence, which has created so much surprise of late, is accounted for by the announcement that the leaders of his party have taken him into a woodshed and informed him that while speech may be silver silence is golden and that he had better go onto the gold platform so far as speech making is concerned.

The beneficial effect of the new tariff law upon business is very promptly and clearly seen. Thousands of men and women have been given employment since its passage was finally insured and large numbers of manufacturing establishments which were suspended or running on short time have resumed work.

"General Prosperity," of whose whereabouts ex-candidate Bryan was anxiously enquiring a few months ago, has put in an appearance, and Bryan and his followers are silent on that subject.

A group of silver statesmen have just left for Japan and China to search for new arguments in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver. It looks like a rather poor time to undertake a task of this sort, when Japan has already gone to the gold standard and China is contemplating the same step.

Those popocratic orators who last fall insisted that Hanna was the cause of the advance in the prices of wheat will probably now insist that he is responsible for the enormous gold developments in Alaska, Peru, Mexico, and other parts of the world.

The silver orator who was so concerned about the dear farmer last year ought to be happy now. The farmer is the most prosperous man in the country today.

The poor Wilson law has had a hard life of it. Kicked and cuffed by everybody, including members of its own party, its demise has been hailed with delight by all.

BUSY ON SUNDAY DRUNKS

are the beginning of sprees that are often wound up in town.

Other Municipal Court Affairs

The case of the state against John Arquette, which was to have been called Wednesday was put over until Thursday for an examination.

The civil action, Paul Schrader against Thomas Rooney et al, involving the value of a note, docketed for today, was adjourned to next Monday, Aug. 23.

Strong Words Used

An abusive language case that had all the earmarks of the outcrop of a neighborhood quarrel of some standing, was fought to a finish during the early forenoon. It seems that August Lempe used towards his next door neighbor, J. B. Hout, language more expressive than elegant. He virtually admitted the impeachment, claiming in extenuation that the provocation was great. The court gave the participants considerable sound advice, the import of which was that it is better for people who live in proximity to live in peace and harmony and if they must quarrel not to carry their differences so far as to require adjudication by the courts. The judgment was a fine of $1 and cost, making a total of $8.75, which was paid. The attorneys were J. H. Groesbeck for Hout and C. C. Russell for the defendant.

MACHINERY IN TALL BUILDINGS

Some of Them Have Veritable Machine Shops Underground.

From Cassier's Magazine: American enterprise in the erection of big buildings for business purposes has become known the world over. Twenty-five story structures have ceased to be startling wonders to inhabitants of the large cities of the United States, and sky scrapers of even more commanding heights are the talk of many prospective builders. For the engineer these piles of stone and metal hold varied and important interests. From the beginning of their foundations his services are indispensable, and after completion the maze of machinery which they hold continues to require them, for advice as well as management. Like the modern ocean steamships, the large business building of the present day harbors, deep down, out of sight of all but the operating force, a magazine of power of which the proportions are but vaguely guessed at by the multitude above. Boilers, engines, dynamos and pumps there are in bewildering numbers, supplying heat, light and power to the upper regions through miles of pipe and wire; humming blowers and exhaust fans both supply and extract air through many branched ducts for ventilating purposes, and ice and refrigerating machines, too, often must have a place, all helping to make up a machinery equipment of magnificent extent. One measure of this—perhaps as good a one as can be given—is the money value of the edifice. In one building, a hotel structure, now going up in the city of New York, the cost of the steam, power, heating and ventilating plants will be in the neighborhood of $250,000, or about £50,000, and that of the electric lighting installation will figure up to even more, $300,000, or about £60,000.

The Ruling Passion

Just why a sermon on hard times should be placed in the bicycle column of the Tribune because the divine who preached the sermon was named Wheeler is one of the dark and dubious mysteries of this bright June day. It is not known that the Rev. Kittredge Wheeler is a devotee of the bicycle; there has never been any allegation to the effect that bicycling and hard times are inseparable, and it would be a daring supposition to presume that the Rev. Wheeler's parishioners are of the kind who can only be reached through the bicycle columns. Yet there is the item. Full in the foreground of the bicycle column it stands, directly under and subsequent to a thrilling narrative of accidents to riders, of arrests of scorchers and elevated tracks for wheelmen, and the heading is "Wheeler's Cause for Hard Times."

Truly, the ways of mankind and of the Chicago Tribune are past all understanding.—Chicago News.

COURT KEPT BUSY ON SUNDAY DRUNKS

JUDGE PHELPS GIVES MUCH GOOD ADVICE.

Spree On the Sabbath Day Will Draw a Heavier Penalty Than Week-Day Transgressions In Future—Hard Words Between Neighbors Repeated In Court.

The municipal court, for a week or more has basked in that delightful silence indicative of "Peace on earth and good will towards man." Today it was deluged with a cloud burst of crime alleged and real that turned memory's pages back to the sultry days of July last when men's tempers seemed to be on the gridiron and the clam digger was abroad in the land spending money with both hands.

Today's criminals real and alleged, showed considerable versatility in the manner of their misdoing. The star case was a complaint for horse stealing, a second was against a citizen for speaking his mind to his neighbor, and the great bulk seemed to be due to an inferior quality of the ardent, or too copious quantities thereof. Of the latter there were some nine or ten which lined up before his honor wearing expressions ranging all the way from "The time we had", to that of deep mortification.

New Rule For Sunday Drunks.
In disposing of the drunk cases,
Judge Phelps announced a line of policy that will without doubt have considerable of a deterring influence on Sunday spree. It was in effect, that the misdemeanor of drunkenness was more serious on Sunday than on the other days of the week, and that in consequence the penalties imposed for Sunday drunks will hereafter be greater.

The first to step to the bar and take his medicine was William Price, who did not deny that he had been drunk.
His offense was committed on Saturday night, and he was let off with a fine of $2 and costs of $1, or three days in jail. The fine and costs were paid.

James Riley was another Saturday night drunk who was assessed $3, which amount at the time of going to press, he had failed to raise.

George Viney was likewise let off with a $3 sentence.

Willing To Work Out His Fine
Hugh Miller was the first of the Sabbath breakers. His medicine was $5 and costs or fifteen days. He intimated that he rather favored the fifteen days.

George West had got nicely started on one of his periodic spree Saturday evening, when Chief Hogan took pity on him and looked him up. When arraigned, West employed the time honored story about not feeling well. His Honor, whose memory appeared to serve him a good turn inquired as to the length of time which had elapsed since West had his last previous ailment of the same character. At first Mr.
West was inclined to think he had not been drunk, later he was almost convinced that he had been but was still firmly of the opinion that this was his quitting time.

West Bought His Freedom.
The chief explained that West was a useful citizen except when he got a start in the direction of the distillery and that as a rule nothing but a few days in that quiet resort in the Rock would turn his fancies onto paths of rectitude and sobriety. Whereupon the court imposed a sentence of three days. West was so firmly of the opinion that he could become a monument of reform that his Honor finally accepted $3 in lieu of the three days.

Arthur McCaffery admitted that Officer Appleby told him he had better go home and that his arrest only came when he insisted on staying and "seeing the sights." At this juncture Chief Hogan intimated that the reason he did not go home was because he was not full enough and the stereotyped $2 and costs was imposed.

John Rowe pleaded that he was asleep when arrested, but Chief Hogan insisted that it required no patrol wagon to arrest a sleeping man.
The court suggested that Rowe was probably walking in his sleep and said $2 and costs. Mr. Rowe was the fortunate possessor of the price and is at this writing a free man.

Willing To Be Convinced.

William Minick only had two or three drinks but rather thought himself guilty, although he represented to the court that he could walk a chalk line when arrested, and wanted to get back to his job of running a threshing machine engine. The court did not think him in a proper condition to run an engine on account of his nerves and gave him $5 and costs or five days.
Minick wanted to trade an order on his employer for the fine and went off entertaining strong hopes that he would succeed in raising the money.
Frank Kelly was charged by Chief Hogan with being drunk most of the time. He got five days.

The monotony of the drunk procession was varied a little by the appearance of Ernest Byres, charged with vagrancy. He made no adequate defense and got fifteen days.

When the docket had been cleared the court asked as to the cause of the numerous cases of drunkenness. The officers could not explain it satisfactorily. There has been more or less comment about town concerning it.
By some it is claimed that the original package law is a promoter of keg parties up and down the river and at other suburban points, and that these

"I STEAL A HORSE?" "NO!" SAID HAMMAS

JOHNSTOWN MAN BACK FROM ROCK ISLAND.

Alfred Austin's Gray Horse Was Missing the Day He Disappeared and Sheriff Acheson Followed and Asked
For An Explanation—Blame Laid
On Gypsies.

The capture of Henry Hammass and his return to Rock county by Sheriff Acheson was a clever bit of work.
Hammass has been in and about Johnstown since the middle of 1894, when he was released from states prison after serving a term of three years for horse stealing at Johnstown.

When Alfred Austin missed an iron gray horse valued at some $60 that had been running in a pasture he thought at first that the animal had strayed.
This was on Aug. 5. On the following Saturday Mr. Austin notified the officers. The sheriff found that Ham-mass had disappeared at the same time as the horse, and thought the matter more than strong coincidence. He makes it a point to keep posted on the habits and movements of local celebrities who have followed the Waupun curriculum, consequently he was not long in locating Hammass at Rock Island, with relatives. He went down to the city whose one great absorbing desire just now appears to be possession of the Modern Woodmen's records and succeeded in locating his man driving along one of the main thoroughfares. However, he was not driving a gray horse.

Had Traded Horses.

After being locked up he admitted trading horses with a Moline livery stable keeper named L. Crawley. Upon investigation Mr. Austin's horse, or one which looked enough like it to be a twin brother was found. Hammass had received $15.00 and another horse in the trade. Hammass explained possession of the gray horse by stating that he fell in with a crowd of gypsies, from whom he secured the gray horse in trade with an animal he brought from Johnstown.

Hammass and his friends were sufficiently opposed to a voluntary return to Wisconsin, to employ an attorney.
Subsequently, and against the advice of the limb of the law, he accompanied the sheriff, without extradition, reaching the city about 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

Hearing Set For Friday.

The appearance for Hammass in court was set for Friday at 10 o'clock.
Bail was fixed at $800. C. E. Pierce the defendants counsel thought his client could furnish $500. The court however maintained that in view of the gravity of the offense the bail was none too small.

SIX GOOD HORSES ENTERED.

Half Mile Running Race Tomorrow Promises To Be Speedy.

The best half mile running race the county has ever seen takes place tomorrow at the Caledonian games. Six horses are entered and all of them are speedy. They are: Sanaduteen, May Briggs, Topay Renden, Slippery Elm,
Red Indian, and Flying Dutchman.
Slippery Elm is the horse formerly owned by Alderman Millmore and raced here a few years ago. Janesville has had but few running races and the Caledonian Society look upon the event as one of the principal attractions on tomorrow's program.

FLOUR TAKES A JUMP ALONG WITH WHEAT

JOINS IN THE SENSATIONAL AUGUST RISE.

Gone Up From $3.80 a Barrel to $5.10 and Likely to Go Higher—The Wheat Boom Stirrs Up the Local Speculators—Farmers Making Millions These Days

The boom in wheat divided discussion with Klondike around town today. More than one man was heard regretting that he did not get into the game a few days ago.

Those who did invest are looking happy and some of them investing some more.

Wheat is not the only product of the farm that has gone up in price. Local dealers are paying more for all produce than they have for a year past.

As might be expected flour has kept company with wheat in the rise in prices. When wheat first started upward less than three weeks ago flour was selling for $3.80 a barrel. Now it is selling for $5.10 a barrel and promises to go up higher still.

The dealers in flour hardly know how to buy at the present time. They don't want to buy much, for fear there may be a drop in prices. All the local dealers were caught with a short supply when the advance came.

If the boom in wheat continues the bakers will be affected. They can't sell bread much longer at the present prices without reducing the size of the loaf.

CHAPTER I.—Fifteen years before the opening of the story John Lewis went to live in a place called Lee, in New Hampshire, with a little girl six years old, Virginia, the daughter of his deceased sister. He had a son who had been left at school, but ran away and shipped for China. Five years after Lewis went to Lee a family named Marvel also settled there. Young Walter Marvel met and loved Virginia Lewis. Alice Marvel, Walter's sister, and Harry Lucas also met and were reported to be in love with each other. At the opening of the story a person purporting to be the missing son of John Lewis arrives at Lee. Walter Marvel proposes for Virginia's hand to her uncle, who refuses, telling him that his uncle, whose name he bears, was a villain and a convict. Young Marvel draws a pistol and shoots at Lewis, but his aim is diverted by Virginia. Soon after Lewis is found dead in his room with two bullet holes in his body. His death occurs simultaneously with the arrival of the man who claims to be his son. It is Mr. Barnes, the celebrated detective, and four burrows, another detective, take up the case, strongly suspecting Virginia as the criminal. III.—They examine the grounds about the house where the murder is committed and find footprints of a man and a woman, the woman's footprints suggesting their suspicions of Virginia. They also find two pistols, one marked "Virginia Lewis," the other marked "Alice Marvel." Virginia writes a letter and goes away with it. Barnes, disguised, follows her. IV.—Virginia gives her letter to one Will Eversly, who posts it. Barnes keeps his eye on it, gets possession of it, and thus learns the whereabouts of Walter Marvel.

CHAPTER V. THE TWO GIRLS.

Virginia Lewis, though living in New England, would never be mistaken for a native of that section. She lacked the phlegmatic temperament of the people about her, notwithstanding the fact that she had been reared among them. Her environment had undoubtedly affected her character to the extent that outwardly she moved, spoke and acted like her neighbors. But there was a certain suppressed emotion, always distinguishable, however well controlled, that bespoke a birthplace in a warmer clime. However mildly she might address her friends, and there were few of gentler speech, the slightest antagonism betrayed by any one present would be met with an instantaneous answering flash of her lustrous dark eyes, which betokened danger if the subject were pursued. Not one, not even those most dear to her, had the courage to take liberties of conversation or of act with Virginia Lewis. Nevertheless, she was the best beloved and most popular young woman in the township. Half the young men the country round were her admirers, ready to become obedient servants in exchange for a friendly nod. Rarer still, she had no enemies among the women folk.

She was not beautiful, yet by many called so. I think this was because of the marvel of her eyes, which, always brilliant and ever restlessly moving, as though to absorb all about her, attracted with a fascination or magnetism which none resisted. It was no wonder that the rays of genuine intelligence shed by those orbs should have been mistaken for beauty, for, after all, it is expressiveness rather than symmetry of lineament which men most admire in a woman.

When at rest, there were hard, set lines about the mouth which, to the physiognomist, unmistakably proclaimed her possession of that excessive will power and dogged persistence which Squire Olney had truly mentioned as characteristic traits. Mr. Barnes had said that he would not expect to surprise her again into a betrayal of herself or her purposes, and in this he showed a keen perception.

She had been very much startled by the abrupt entrance of the two men and their subsequent announcement that they were detectives. She noticed that Mr. Barnes had kept the empty cartridge shell which had dropped from her lap, but in the moment of her surprise she had not time to decide upon the best course consistent with whatever purpose she was bent upon accomplishing. When they left her, she sat down and meditated for some time. Presently she arose, and it was evident that her plan had been formulated. She took the pistol from the cabinet, where Mr. Barnes shrewdly guessed that it was.

Whatever had been her reason for removing the shell which Mr. Barnes had taken it was plain that she now considered her purpose unattainable. Opening the drawer of her bureau, she took therefrom a small mahogany box, which she unlocked. In it were several paste-board packages of ball cartridges. One, however, contained shells which had been exploded. She next withdrew a cartridge from the pistol, and in its stead inserted an empty shell, being careful to see that the hammer exactly rested upon the indentation in the rim. Thus it is evident that if she had removed from this pistol the empty shell which Mr. Barnes had picked up she must have reloaded the weapon prior to his entrance. Now she was restoring it to its original condition. She threw the pistol on the bed, as though desirous that it should be readily found.

Next she opened a drawer of the cabinet and took out two pieces of folded paper. One of these was a duplicate of that found by the detectives, bearing the words, "If I am dead in the morning, my murderer is —," except that, as Mr. Barnes had guessed, this one bore a name, the sentence being completed. Virginia scrutinized this for some moments, sighed deeply and refolded it. The other was also a half sheet and bore a few lines addressed to herself. She read this several times and then folded it also, placing both papers in her dress.

Approaching the door which communicated with the parlor, she listened attentively for a few moments and then entered that apartment, which was empty, the detectives, by this time, having gone out upon the lawn. Peeping from the window, careful that she herself should be hidden from sight by the curtains, she saw Mr. Barnes and Burrows near the summer house. She watched them until they were again approaching the house, whereupon she returned to her own room. Here she remained till the detectives had made the map of the grounds and again sallied forth toward the river. This time she watched them from the window of her own room and realized from their actions that they were studying the footprints between the house and the river. She also saw them get in the boat and cross the river.

Once more she entered the parlor. One would think from her repeated visits to the place where lay the dead body that it had some fascination for her. As though, indeed, this were the case, she went straight to where it lay and, bending down, gazed at it intently. Especially did she look upon the disfigured face. Finally she turned her attention to the hand and examined a ring on one finger. This seemed to satisfy her. In rising she stepped on the hem of her dress and fell to her knees, striking against the corpse, which was thus slightly turned over. This action brought into view the other hand, which, before had been under the body. She shuddered as she jumped up, and then, noting that the fist was doubled up tight, her curiosity was aroused, and she endeavored to open the fingers, and though they were tightly clinched, she at length succeeded in relaxing two. This enabled her not only to see that there was something within the dead man's grasp, but also to withdraw it. This done, she evidently had enough of the company of the corpse, for she hurried to the next room and hastily closed the door after her.

She then examined the article which she had just obtained and found it to be a small gold locket. Opening it, she saw that it contained a miniature of herself which had been made when she was yet a child.

She was evidently disturbed at the discovery, for she gazed at it long and earnestly. Perhaps her conscience troubled her, and the thought came to her that even at the moment when he was killed her uncle had just been looking at this picture of herself, thinking of the time when, a young and attractive child, she had been his idol, and then of the past week, when, before all their friends, they had antagonized their wills. She threw herself on the bed, buried her face in her hands, and for some minutes she sobbed like one in dire distress. Presently, rising from her recumbent position, controlling her emotions by an effort of will, she first hid the locket in her dress, as she had done with the letters, and then bathed her face and went to the window. She looked toward the summer house, but saw nothing of the detectives. Turning, she hurriedly put on her hat, arranged her toilet and started out from the house in the direction of the postoffice.

She thought that she had avoided the observation of the detectives, but in this, as she herself subsequently suspected, she was mistaken. Reaching the bridge, she noticed the boat, and as she had last seen the two men entering it she concluded that they were now in the vicinity, though she did not yet guess that they had followed her. As she passed the saloon, however, she caught a glimpse of Burrows, and as he immediately withdrew, so as to hide himself from her view, she at once decided that he was there to watch her movements. Thus she was compelled to abandon her project of mailing the letter, a task which had been her object in coming out. She went on to the house of the Marvels.

Being on terms of closest intimacy with the inmates, she unceremoniously entered without knocking and went into the parlor. Here, seated in front of a rousing log fire, she found Mrs. Marvel, busily engaged with some knitting and evidently ignorant of the fact that at that very time grave suspicions were entertained against her son. The old lady politely rose and welcomed her visitor, but Virginia, without accepting her invitation to be seated, at once inquired for her daughter Alice.

"Alice is not out of bed yet," said the mother. "She sent me a message at breakfast time that she had a headache and preferred to sleep. But you can go up to her room if you wish. I guess she is not seriously ill." She smiled, well knowing that her daughter was fond of her morning nap, and that "a headache" was often a convenient excuse.

Virginia at once went in search of her friend. Ascending one flight of stairs, she entered Alice Marvel's bedroom. Alice was in bed, but not asleep. On the contrary, she seemed very wide awake, although completely absorbed with her thoughts.

A moment's description of this young lady may not be amiss. Though, like Virginia, a brunette, she was nevertheless totally different in appearance. Her friends called her pretty, and the term was applicable, for though she possessed a charming face she could be called neither handsome nor beautiful. Small, well chiseled features, a rosy, pert little mouth, piercing black eyes, chestnut brown hair and a clear complexion with considerable color, these were the salient points in her favor. In stature she was petite. But it was her manner more than her physical charms that was her chief attraction. Vivacious, impetuous, with powerful emotions, loving and hating with a degree of intensity foreign to the American born, it was easy to detect that Alice Marvel had French blood in her veins.

Her father had chosen his bride in Paris and continued his residence in that city until Alice was 15. Then he returned to America with his family, which included Walter, who was two years older than his sister, and immediately thereafter settled in Lee. Alice was now in her twenty-fifth year.

Startled from her meditations by the abrupt entrance of her friend, Alice stared at her a moment in silence and then suddenly exclaimed:

"Is he dead?"

"Is who dead?" asked Virginia, amazed at the question.

"Your uncle, Mr. Lewis," replied Alice, at which Virginia was so bewildered that she stood speechless. Knowing that the fact of her uncle's death had been so recently discovered and also that Alice had not left her own room, Virginia was at a loss to understand how she had become aware of the true state of affairs. It occurred to her that perhaps, after all, the maidservant had informed Alice, but in that case it should have been known also by Mrs. Marvel, whereas that lady had acted in a way which precluded the supposition that the news had reached her ears. Recovering somewhat from the first effects of her surprise, she asked:

"How did you know that he is dead?"

Alice started at this question, and then, as though awakening from a dream, replied:

"I don't know what I have been saying. I think I was dreaming when you came in and—and I must have continued aloud what was passing through my mind."

"Your dream, then, is wonderfully near the truth, for my uncle was found dead this morning, and he has undoubtedly been murdered."

"Murdered! My God, this is frightful!" With a convulsive tremor, which passed over her whole frame, Alice lay back and buried her face in her pillow. Virginia gazed at her, not knowing how to construe her agitation. A moment later Alice, with one bound, leaped from the bed and, rushing up to Virginia, exclaimed excitedly:

"You say he was murdered. How do you know it? Who can prove it? Did any one see it? Who did it? Who did it, I say? Tell me!"

"Hush! Do you know what you are saying? If any one heard you, it would be suspected!"

"What would be suspected? What is suspected? Tell me! I must know! I will know! I!"

"Silence! Are you still in a dream? You must stop this wild language. Stop "Murdered! My God, this is frightful!"

it! Stop it instantly!" Taking Alice by the shoulders, she shook her, and by her words and manner Virginia at length subdued somewhat the intensity of her friend's excitement. Then occurred the inevitable reaction. Alice threw herself on the bed and abandoned herself to a wild paroxysm of tears. Virginia endeavored to calm and soothe her, but for a long time her attentions only aggravated the hysterical sobbing. After awhile, however, she became more quiet, and Virginia sought an explanation.

"Now, Alice," said she, "you must tell me how you knew that my uncle is dead."

"Hush! I cannot tell you. I cannot. I cannot."

"But you must. Evidently you know something about this, and you must tell me."

"It is impossible."

"Can you not trust me? Come, Alice, you must be reasonable. We are wasting time that is most precious. Do you know who is or will be suspected of this crime?"

"Do you know? Then tell me!" said Alice in feverish anxiety.

"Listen. There are two detectives—"

"What! Already?" interrupted Alice in a terrified voice. "And you say they suspect some one?"

"Alice, you, too, suspect some one. Who is it? If you and the detectives suspect the same man, I will help to shield him. You know that."

"Him? Whom do you mean?" Now it seemed that Alice was puzzled.

"Whom do I mean? Who was it that quarreled with my uncle? Who was it that threatened to kill him?"

"My God, you mean my brother!" Alice sank in a chair and sat staring like one in a trance. Finally, by a great effort, she aroused herself and seemed to regain her self possession.

"Virginia, you must think me out of my mind to have acted as I have, but I have had a terrible night. In my dreams I have seen your uncle murdered in a thousand fantastic ways. Therefore it is not strange that when you startled me I should have addressed you as I did. It was a tremendous shock to have you announce that all which my imagination had pictured was really true."

"Undoubtedly, Alice, but it is a strange coincidence that you should have had such dreams. What were you thinking of when you retired that my uncle should have been so conspicuously in your thoughts?"

"I was thinking of him. But I will tell you the truth at once."

"Stop a moment. I will listen to your story after awhile. It is of vital importance that no more time should be lost in warning Walter of the danger which threatens him."

"Yes, but how will you do it? Do you know where he is?"

"He is in Portsmouth by this time, I hope. He will expect a letter from me tomorrow morning. I came out to post it, but I am certain that I am watched by the detectives. I did not dare to go to our office for fear that they would discover just what I do not want them to know. The only way left is to send the letter to New Market and mail it there. How can we do that?"

Alice had entirely composed herself and while her friend spoke was rapidly dressing. She replied:

"I know the very one to trust, for of course it must be a tried friend, as the bearer of the letter will discover the address. Will Eversly is the man for this emergency. Walter, you remember, saved him once when he was nearly drowned, and since then I believe he has been ready to sacrifice his life for my brother at any moment."

"Will is the man that I had in my mind. Can you send one of the boys to his house for him?"

"Wait here till I return, and I will fix it." With these words Alice quitted the room. Left to herself, Virginia was at once thoughtful. She could not believe that all the agitation which she had witnessed in her friend was solely due to the coincidence of a nightmare. Yet how could Alice have really known anything of the crime, since she had not been out of her own room, unless indeed she had been present the night before? Alice returned and, as she entered, said:

"I have sent Frank, one of the stable boys, for Will. Now, shall I tell you what I did last night?"

Virginia signified her assent, and her companion proceeded.

"Harry Lucas had promised to take me to drive in the evening, but during the afternoon he called and told me that it would be impossible to do so, as he had received a note which would make it necessary for him to leave town. I did not doubt his statement, and after a little conversation he left the house. After his departure I found on the floor a note which he must have dropped in taking his handkerchief from his pocket. Of course I had no right to read it, and I did not think of doing so until I recognized that the address was in your writing."

Alice paused, but Virginia said nothing, though the color deepened on her cheek. Alice continued:

"I suppose that, knowing you had accepted my brother's love, it was a contemptible thing for me to feel jealous. Nevertheless I confess with shame and regret that such was the case. Therefore I opened the note. As you know the contents, you can readily imagine that what I read was scarcely calculated to dissipate my anger. You invited him to a secret meeting. The hour named was for last evening. Thus Harry had broken his promise to me, giving me a false excuse, in order to meet you."

"Impetuous, as you know I am, I at once determined to be present. You had specified that he should wait for you in the south side of the summer house on your lawn. I had only to go early and conceal myself in the northern division. As I drew on my cloak preparatory to starting my eye fell on my pistol, which lay on my dressing case, and, though I did not think of needing it or of using it, in my excitement I took it up and slipped it into my pocket. I reached the place first, as was my intention, and patiently awaited your arrival. Harry came, and you joined him promptly. I need not tell you what occurred between you. I overheard every word, and you can imagine how much ashamed I was of my doubt of Harry and of yourself when I learned the real object of the meeting. I felt like revealing my presence and begging your pardon, but my pride prevented me. So I remained in my place of concealment until both of you had left. Then I hurried home."

"But this would scarcely account for the dreams," said Virginia, without commenting on the rest of the story.

"I have not finished. I said that I had taken my pistol with me when I went out. On my return I was alarmed at not finding it, for, as you know, my name is engraved on the stock. My imaginative mind at once commenced to picture all kinds of trouble. What if some one should find the weapon and commit a crime with it? Might not the finger of suspicion point at me? I felt inclined to return and look for it, but the distance is a long one, and besides I could not be sure of recovering it. Therefore, trying to persuade myself that my fears were silly, I endeavored to go to sleep. But, oh, Virgie, what a night I have passed!" She shuddered at the recollection.

"I can readily understand and am now not surprised at what you said when I came in. Shall we go down and see if the boy has returned?" The two girls left the room and descended to the floor below. Here they found their messenger and were informed that Will Eversly would be ready to go on their errand as soon as he could get his horse out. A quarter of an hour later Eversly drove up, and Alice carried the letter out to him.

As soon as the horse and wagon were out of sight on the road to New Market, Virginia prepared to return home, whereupon Alice expressed her intention to accompany her, hoping to recover her pistol, and together they started to walk to Riverside.

Big Profits.

The addressing, folding, inclosing, sealing and stamping of five thousand circulars, with postage, will cost at least $65, whether the circular is good or bad. Notwithstanding this fixed charge, some strive to save a dollar or two on the cost of printing, although the goods advertised are to be judged by the character of the printing, just as a house is judged by the character of its salesmen. Good printing costs but little more, and that "little more" brings greater returns than any other part of the cost. Order your printing where good work is assured.

STORIES OF JOHN CHAMBERLIN

He Knew All Liquors Apart Even When They Were Mixed.

From What to Eat. They are again telling stories about John Chamberlin, for many years before his death proprietor of the place known as "Chamberlin's," in Washington. The place occupied three handsome houses, which in their earlier days had served as residences for Fernando Wood, of New York; Governor Swan, of Maryland, and James G. Blaine. It was long known as the highest priced restaurant at the capital; in fact, Chamberlin prided himself on the altitude of his rates, as well as the excellence of his cuisine.

A story has often been told, but seems quite as good as ever, of Colonel Dick Wintersmith, of Kentucky, well known about the capital. A young friend was with him at Chamberlin's and expressed a desire for beefsteak and onions, but said he couldn't indulge in the dish, as he was going to the theater that evening with some ladies and his breath would betray him. "Don't be afraid, my boy," said Uncle Dick; "just go right ahead and eat your beefsteak and onions; when John sends in your bill it will take your breath away."

Colonel John R. Fellows, of New York, says that he went into Chamberlin's one day, got a glass of buttermilk with corn bread and his check was $1.80. Another declares that he made a note of the charge of a breakfast at Chamberlin's more out of curiosity than anything else. The breakfast consisted of a piece of boiled mackerel, a cup of coffee, a pitcher of cream with the coffee, a plate of toast and a boiled Irish potato. The bill was $1.30. But Chamberlin said, in reply to his interrogation, "Why, man, you didn't pay a cent for the fish. You just paid for the cooking and waiting."

One night in Washington Chamberlin joined a group of friends and changed his drinks continuously. He drank plain whisky, apple toddy, hot Scotch and a gin fizz. Some one said to him, "John, if we should follow your example we should get pretty full." "Full," said Chamberlin, "I never saw a lot of fellows sitting around a table late at night in here with any other idea than getting full." The man's knowledge of wines and liquors was something remarkable. It is said that once in the Hotel Bellevue, in Philadelphia, he sent a drink back, saying to the waiter, "I told you to request the bar-keeper to use Plymouth gin and Italian vermouth in this cocktail. He has put in Holland gin and French vermouth, and I wouldn't give ten cents for a hundred such drinks." Some of the party were curious to know if he was right and went to the bar and examined the bottles. They found that he was correct in every particular. Mr. Chamberlin had no French chefs and no foreign cookery. His cooks were negro women, but it was his taste that dominated everything. He bought the best to be had in the market, and by many his restaurant was considered superior to anything in New York. His friends got a bill through congress giving him the privilege of erecting a hotel on government ground at Fortress Monroe. A million and a half dollars was subscribed to build the house and his great hope was to live to see it completed, but this privilege was denied him. He died of gout and Bright's disease, brought on, undoubtedly by his system of living. It is said that he has been known to eat at supper eighteen medium sized oysters, half a lobster, a welsh rarebit and two dozen roasted clams. With such indulgence it is scarcely to be wondered that he died when he did; the marvel is that he reached middle age.

CURING DRUNKENNESS.

We believe the best authorities are generally skeptical as to there being any cure for confirmed habits of inebriety unless the effort in that direction be aided by a strong exercise of the will of the unfortunate subject of the bad habit. There are, however, many remedies recommended as aids in diverting or in a minor degree satisfying the appetite for strong liquors, which are undoubtedly of great advantage in some cases, and one of these is thus recommended by a self-styled "rescued man:"

"I was one of those unfortunates given to strong drink. When I left it off I felt a horrid want of something I must have or go distracted. I could neither eat, work nor sleep. Explaining my affliction to a man of much education and experience, he advised me to make a decoction of ground quassia, a half ounce steeped in a pint of vinegar, and to put about a small teaspoonful of it in a little water, and to drink it down every time the liquor thirst came on. I satisfied the cravings and it sufficed a feeling or stimulus and strength.

"I continued this cure and persevered until the thirst was conquered. For two years I have not tasted liquor and I have no desire for it. Lately, to try my strength, I have handled and smelt whisky, but I have no temptation to take it. I give this for the consideration of the unfortunate, several of whom I know have recovered by means which I no longer require."

A Remarkable Cure of Chronic Diarrhoea.

In 1962, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contracted chronic diarrhoea. It has given me a great deal of trouble ever since. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend sent me a sample bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50 cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cannot be thankful enough to you for this great Remedy, and recommend it to all suffering veterans. If in doubt write me. Yours gratefully, HENRY STEINBERGER, Allentown, Pa. Sold at C. D. Stevens' pharmacy, corner Main and Milwaukee streets.

It is always gratifying to receive testimonials for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and when the endorsement is from a physician it is especially so. "There is no more satisfactory or effective remedy than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes Dr. R. E. Kobey, physician and pharmacist, of Olney, Mo.; and as he has used the remedy in his own family and sold it in his drug store for six years, he should certainly know. For sale at C. D. AGREEABLY DISAPPOINTED.

He Thought She Was Begging but She Merely Wanted the Mustard.

One of the richest men living, whose immense wealth makes him a target for poor people, has recently been in Paris and the way in which he repelled one of the applicants for his generosity is related like this, says the Pittsburg Dispatch: On the opposite side of the hotel table sat a woman who had once been rich.

"Monsieur, you Englishmen are so chivalrous—so ready to assist those in distress."

"Yes," said the man of wealth, hesitating. He had heard that before and thought he knew what was coming next.

"Would you, with your usual generosity, do me a favor and a great kindness?"

"Yes, madam—that is, it depends somewhat—"

"Think well, monsieur, before you promise, for it is a great kindness."

It was the same old plea that he had heard many times before from people who wanted a loan.

"I am afraid, madam, that I shall have to—but what it is you wish?"

"Only that you would be kind enough, monsieur, to pass me the mustard. You have everything on your side of the table."

SALARY OF ROYALTY.

In round numbers the government of Great Britain pays $3,000,000 annually to the royal family. Of this sum the queen receives nearly $2,000,000, besides her revenues from the duchy of Lancaster, which amounts to a quarter of a million.

The lord lieutenant of Ireland receives $100,000 a year for his salary and expenses. The Prince of Wales gets only $200,000 a year.

The president of France receives $240,000 each year for salary and expenses—an enormous sum when it is considered that France has the stupendous national debt of $6,000,000,000, the largest ever incurred by any nation of the world.

Italy pays her king $2,600,000 each year. The civil list of the German emperor is about $4,000,000 a year, besides large private revenues from personal estates. The czar of Russia owns in fee simple 1,000,000 square miles of cultivated land and has an income of $12,000,000.

When little Alfonso of Spain comes of age he will be one of the richest monarchs of Europe, as the state allows him $1,400,000 annually, with an additional $600,000 for family expenses.

It is not so much that the advertiser has good ads or good mediums or good positions. Unless a definite, vigorous plan lies behind all these, much of their good effect will be dissipated. It is by the combination and intelligent direction of all these forces that success in advertising is to be obtained.
